Camellia Fete Parade Turns Cold And Damp

The 23rd Annual Camellia Festival Parade started out just after 10 a.m. Saturday with an all-female color guard from McClellan Air Force Base and a sky that was spitting a few drops of rain and threatening to let it all fall out.

It ended 57 minutes later with the Mandarins Drum & Bugle Corps and spectators seeking shelter from — not the rain — but the cold.

In between, while the clouds were lifting and the temperatures were dropping, the crowd was amused by bands, bicycles, beauties, baton-twirlers, Boy Scouts, Brownies and a boxer — the parade marshal was Pete Ranzany, still bearing evidence of the tough, and successful, defense he had made the night before of his North American Boxing Federation welterweight title.

There were also Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts, drill teams, people with guns, people with drums, an organ grinder with a mechanical monkey, a 3-1/2-year-old majorette and a contestant from the Gong Show.

Not to mention the one — and far from only — Ronald McDonald.

And, of course, the upwards of 100 units in the procession included a plethora of floats, all decorated with varieties of the flower that made all this possible — the camellia.

The Grand Sweepstakes winner in the adult class among these floats was entered by Monitor Lodge of the Order of Vasa (Swedish Lodge).

The parade was honoring Italy and the theme was "Roman Holiday," so the winning float paid homage to one of the great Italian children's story with a fine floral statue of Pinocchio.

The Grand Sweepstakes award in the youth division went to C.P. Huntington School for a Roman chariot.

Fern Bacon Junior High School took the Governor's Trophy, Our Lady of Grace School got the Mayor's Trophy and the President's Trophy was awarded to the City Recreation Department's Handicapped Program and honorable mention went to the Odakata Campfire Girls.

The winner of the McDonald's Theme Trophy was the Hammer family with the recreation department's handicapped program second and the Huntington school third.

Sweepstakes winner: 'Pinocchio' from Monitor Lodge.
